Our Unique Schedule

Since we began, we've offered programs at a faster pace than traditional schools, so that students can adapt to the unique schedule of their industries and have the potential to graduate in less time.

To accomplish this, Full Sail students are scheduled into lectures and lab sessions in four-hour blocks throughout the day – often up to 40 hours per week. These month-long classes build upon previous coursework and prepare students for topics in their upcoming courses. In fact, all of Full Sail's campus bachelor's programs are designed to be completed – from first class to graduation – in just 20 months.

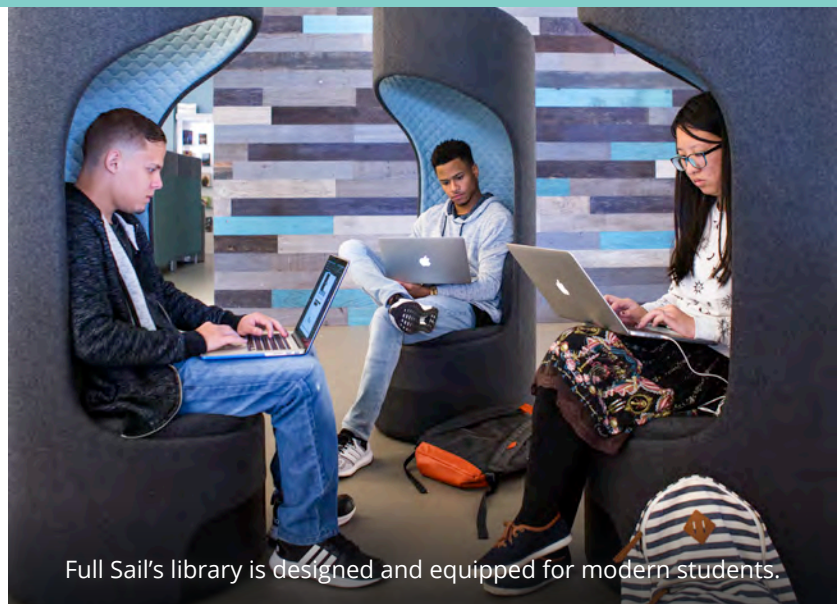

Students work on professional productions inside the Full Sail Live venue.

Tuition

Full Sail University structures its tuition in a unique way that includes books, supplies, and fees, which means your costs are transparent and locked for the duration of your program, so it won't rise from semester to semester. The cost of a computer and software is assessed through a separate, one-time fee, and it provides students with a laptop computer and media creation software at an educational discount.

Full Sail also offers a variety of institutional scholarships for qualified students.

Full Sail's library is designed and equipped for modern students.

On-campus career expos connect students with potential employers.

Career Development

Beginning with the first day of orientation, career preparation is an integral component of a Full Sail education. Our industry-focused degree programs deeply integrate career skills into the curriculum, and workshops focused on networking, resume development, and interview skills are available throughout the year. Additionally, our Career Development department connects students and graduates with a vast range of career opportunities through advising sessions and regular career expos on campus and throughout the country. The result is more than three decades of Full Sail grads achieving success at all levels in the entertainment and creative industries.
